

International Recognition for Local Communications Company

St. John's, NL – Nine Island Communications has won four international marketing and communications awards for the company's work in promoting and raising awareness about women in business and celebrating pharmaceutical history.

Nine Island received MarCom awards for the following projects:

Platinum Award - A Dose of History - James J. O'Mara Pharmacy Museum 30th Anniversary

- Video/Audio | Video/Film | Educational Institution

Gold Award - Extrapreneurs - Season One

- Video/Audio | Video/Film | Informational
- Digital Media | Web Video | Informational

Gold Award - 2017 Newfoundland and Labrador Organization of Women Entrepreneurs (NLOWE) - Entrepreneur of the Year Awards Videos

- Video/Audio | Video/Film | Special Event

The 2018 MarCom Awards — which honours work from large international agencies and Fortune 500 companies to individual creative professionals — received more than 6,500 entries from 20 countries.

Nine Island co-owner Ronnie Walsh says, "We have great clients who want to use video to tell their stories. In the case of the business show, we're using our skillset as former journalists to share important stories about women in business. We're grateful for this recognition and very proud of these projects."

A Dose of History - James J. O'Mara Pharmacy Museum 30th Anniversary was a special recreation video to commemorate the pharmacy museum's anniversary. Extrapreneurs was broadcast on RogersTV and streamed online at extrapreneurs.ca. The show discusses topics diversity and inclusion, social media marketing, financial management, and mental health. The NLOWE Entrepreneur of the Year Awards Videos were feature videos about each award winner.

Nine Island co-owner Peter Walsh added, "We're committed to doing great work and supporting our clients the best way we can. It's not lost on us how fortunate we are to make a living as storytellers, helping our clients build their brands, and raise awareness about important issues in our society."
